

Swedish Maritime Administration measures and guidelines related to covid-19, pilotage

The Swedish Maritime Administration follows the recommendations from the Public Health Agency of Sweden in terms of protecting yourself and others from infection. This means that:

- We try to avoid physical meetings as often as possible
- We stay at home if we feel unwell
- We take general preventive measures – observing good hand hygiene, avoiding close physical contact with other people and specifically contact with sick people.
- We continuously inform our staff on the latest development of the covid-19 spread and precaution policy.
- We seek ways of transportation for our Pilots that lowers the possibility for close physical contact with other persons.

Requirements to report suspected infection

The Swedish Maritime Administration must be informed if someone on-board the ship has been diagnosed with the coronavirus, has symptoms of the disease or is suspected of being infected by the coronavirus. If there is, a suspicion of corona (covid-19) on-board, master or broker/client shall notify the relevant pilot-ordering centre by telephone or e-mail when ordering pilots as below.

Failure to report any suspicion of corona (covid-19) on-board will be reported to responsible authority for further actions.

Routines during pilotage

Our pilots comply with all guidelines and recommendations issued by the authorities as a means of protecting themselves and others from contagions. The Swedish Maritime Administration will not accept any additional requirements or measures with regard to our personnel, which may affect our ability to carry out our mission. We reserve the right to have several pilots and pilot trainees on board to ensure the continuity of our service. During pilotage, only persons necessary for safe passage shall be present on the bridge. Thank you for your cooperation and understanding.
